
* Unless otherwise noted in the figure caption, images are by the author. Image Gallery figures are not edited by AJA to the same level as the published article’s figures.

Fig. 1. Sections of three borings for mortises in the bathing slab at Tiryns (after Küpper 1996, fig. 104).

Fig. 2. Layout of the seven units of the Tiryns dado (after Moser v. Filseck 1986, fig. 9).

Fig. 3. State and restored sections of the kyanos frieze in the vestibule of the Tiryns megaron (modified from Müller 1930, fig. 66).
Fig. 4. Denuded north wall looking east (terracotta containers are missing in this 1974 photograph).

Fig. 5. Exit channel for water in northeastern corner of bathing slab at Tiryns. Note preliminary saw marks at arrows.
Fig. 6. Terracotta drainage channel found in Room X, a light well (after Schliemann 1976, fig. 118).

Fig. 7. Bathing area at Pseira in Building BC, Room 4 (modified from McEnroe 2001, pl. 11).
Fig. 8. Portion of Caravanserai area at Knossos (modified from Evans 1928, fig. 48).

Works Cited

