

Supplementary Content: Image Gallery

Images to accompany the American Journal of Archaeology publication:

Tortoise-Shell Lyres from Phrygian Gordion

Samuel Holzman

Link to this article: <http://dx.doi.org/10.3764/aja.120.4.0537>

Published online 19 September 2016
American Journal of Archaeology Volume 120, Number 4
DOI: 10.3764/ajaonline1204.Holzman.suppl

This online-only published content is freely available electronically immediately upon publication and can be distributed under the Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial License (CC BY-NC). This license allows anyone to reuse, remix, and build upon the content, as long as it is for legal noncommercial purposes; the new work must credit the author, the AJA, and the Archaeological Institute of America.

Unless otherwise noted in the caption, images are by the author. Images are not edited by the AJA to the same level as those in the published article.

FIG. 1. A live tortoise (T. graeca) juxtaposed next to Carapace 1.

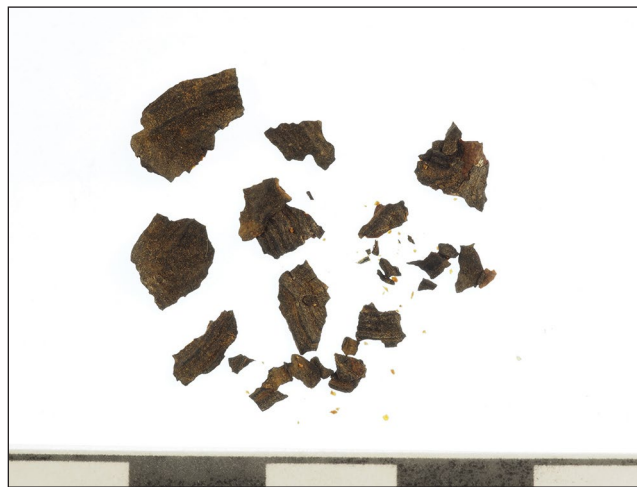

FIG. 2. Fragments of keratin scutes found together with Carapace 2 (G. Bieg; courtesy Penn Museum, Gordion Project Archives, image no. 2014-5312).

FIG. 3. A modern tortoise (T. graeca), comparable in size to Carapaces 1 and 2, spotted on the Northeast Ridge at Gordion.

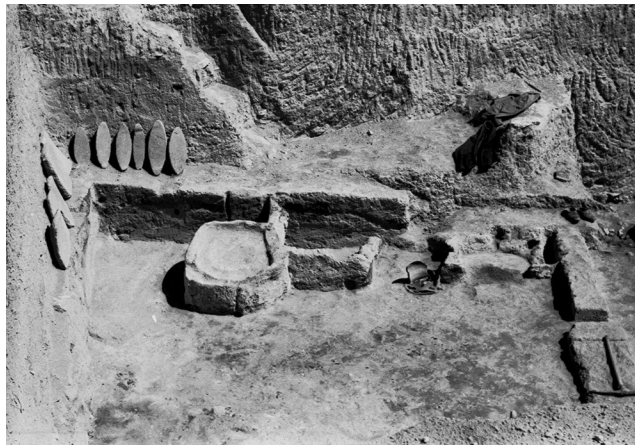

FIG. 4. The Bakery in Southwest House, facing north with the grindstones displayed against the scarp. From west to east are the kneading trough, storage bin, and two ovens (courtesy Penn Museum, Gordion Project Archives, image no. GR 66-10).

FIG. 5. The Mudbrick Vault with one of the radial guide walls of the tumulus left unexcavated above its southwest corner (courtesy Penn Museum, Gordion Project Archives, image no. GR 62-25).

FIG. 6. Carapace 1 in situ, upside down in the fill of the Mudbrick Vault during excavation (courtesy Penn Museum, Gordion Project Archives, image no. GR 62-19).